List	Notes	Van	Van
Set your budget and stick to it, consider all extras. Tow vehicle and it's towing capacity, this will limit what you can buy? How will you be using your van and how often, are you going off-road, on-road, quick overnight stops, or longer stays? Where you will store your pride and joy and write down any height or length restrictions. How many people will the van need to accommodate, (now and in the future)? Do you need a toilet and shower? On road costs, insurance and registration. Accessories e.g. solar panel, extra gas bottle, water tanks. Always get your van built with all the accessories you need, they will be recorded within your tare weight. Extra bits and pieces. Generator, annexe, power cable, bbq, outside table and chairs, plates, cups, cutlery, bedding etc.

Try keeping a score of each van you look at. Compare your scores to the price of each option.
A higher price van might actually have a lower score for what you really want, it may not be as good as it seems just because it costs more.

Don't make a spur of the moment decision, get as much info as you can get, sit down at the show or at home, have a cuppa or maybe something stronger, discuss and decide. Making a call or head back the next day if you are able, in the scheme of things, a small price to pay for such a big outlay.

Oh ... don't forget to take our list with you!
